Tone is the narrator's attitude to his subject. It's like the tone of the voice in that people use the same words to describe them. For example, you could say that the narrator's tone is sarcastic if the narrator mocked the characters. Unlike the tone of the voice, which listeners can draw a conclusion from the sound, readers can draw a conclusion only the tone of the narrator from the words. This means that readers should pay special attention. Being able to perceive the narrator's tone is a basic reading skill, although it requires critical thinking. The reader must understand the text, consider the sincerity of the narrator and make a judgment. The reader must decide whether the narrator is overreacting, sulking, or just playing around. Here are some sheets to give students a practice with a revealing tone. Each sheet has four poems. The speaker in each poem expresses a certain tone. Students should read poetry, determine the tone of speakers and explain their response via text. Although I have included the keys to the answer, please keep in mind that these are suggestions. Student responses will change. Tone Sheet 1 This sheet has four poems, each with a different tone. Students define the tone of the speaker in each poem and explain their answers through text.
